to whom they rightfully belong we believe it would transpire that the cause is to be found in the practice which so largely prevails of neglecting to have the shares transferred when a sale and purchase is effected. Let us suppose a case. A man buys certain stock, and instead of having it duly transferred to his own name, simply locks up the documents, or carolessly puts them aside in some out-of-the-way place. In case of his death the documents may be lost sight of in winding up the estate, and both the principal and the accruing interest are lost to his heirs. The party in whose name the shares stand, and to whom in ordinary course the dividend warrant would have been forwarded may return it to the company, or he may have left the colony without appointing any attorney bere to receive money on his behalf. The money then remains in the Company's hands. There are other cases in which it remains in the hands of the person whose

In most cases, of the autograph signature of course, a prompt application for the amoun comes from the party then in possession of the Proprietors, Worcester; and scrip, but sometimes months pass before the original receiver hears anything more of the matter, and in some cases no doubt no ap- parties, it is very undesirable that the matter Of Grocers and Oilmen plication at all is made and the money remains in the hands of a party who has really no title to it. The amount of property involved, in comparison with the large volume of share business constantly flowing in the colony, is of course insignificant, but to the individuals entitled to it it would possibly be anything but significant. The probability is that shares lost sight of in this way in most cases belong to small estates, and that the amounts involved would be of material assistance to the parties entitled to them.

TRIBUTE TO ENGLISH RULE

A well-informed writer begins in the last number of the Revue des Deux Mondes a series of articles on "The Future of the English Power." He is mainly concerned this time with India and the Afghan-question of which he gives on the whole an impartial account. Among much in his forecast that is not very favourable to England it is interesting to meet with the following tribute to the character of our rule in the past:— The organization of the Anglo-Indian Empire s the masterpiece of English policy. There has been nothing comparable to it since the days of Rome. It has been not a work of force. but a triumph of intelligence, for all the wheels of the immense administrative machine have been worked by two or three thousand functionaries: It is impossible, too; not to admire the constant solicitude England has shown for the populations dependent on her. Everywhere in India she has lone the work of civilization and progress. mere maintenance of tranquillity would alone have been an immense benefit to a country which had at other times been desolated by the incessant he sat down, he drank a glass of ited water and strifes of petty native princes; but England has ate a couple of oranges: when the waiter came added to tranquillity the further blessing of commercial security and judicial impartiality. Nor has she left anything undone to diffuse education amongst the masses; and, justice compels one to acknowledge that in her dealings with India England has neglected none of the obligations of a civilized Government.

INDICTION AND CHINESE DICTIONARY. WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION.

An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong. For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extense. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of The remaining £5,000 will be employed by space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have herotofore characterized Chinese publications. To the illustrate the vast scope of the work following facts are submitted for consideration: Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 THE Company's Steamship Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the quires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as

In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasion-

EXTRACT. AN INVITATION. Where the flower'd rushes grow. And the water lilies blow. Let us go, love, let us go; For the river runneth clear As we found it yester year When the Sammer days were here. I am surs you don't forget How that morning, when we met, All the bank was dewy wet; And I dipp'd the glouming oar, And we push'd from off the shore. Two together, and no more. And we moved along up-stream Till the banks began to seem A procession in a dream : Till we came where willows lank From an islet leaned and drank. And we landed on the bank. And you hurt your foot a little, For the root you trod was brittle; But you did not care a tittle (You remember) for the sprain; And you hid a tear of pain, And your smile came back again Come away, then, be it ours To renew those golden hours Where the river runs through flowers And the water-lilies blow. You shall steer, and I will row, Let us go, leve, let us go.
